Course description

Ann & Robert H. Lurie Children's Hospital Chicago's Fetal Cardiac Workshop: Fetal Echocardiography in Congenital Heart Disease, is a single day conference that will review fetal echocardiographic assessment of congenital heart disease focusing on prenatal detection of cardiac structural abnormalities, cardiac dysfunction and fetal arrhythmia. The topics were designed to increase the participant's knowledge base through didactic lectures and reinforcement through practical approach with interesting case presentations. The talks will be led by Lurie Children's pediatric cardiologists with expertise in diagnosis and management of congenital heart disease in the fetus. Our invited keynote speaker from Children's Hospital of Philadelphia will add expertise to our conference.

The interesting case presentations will focus on applying the didactic lectures to real-life clinical scenarios. The interesting cases will emphasize the necessity for accurate diagnosis and understanding when a referral for further assessment is warranted.

Additional information

The session on Saturday, September 11, 2021 will include presentations and demonstration of live scanning with interactive Q & A sessions and moderated panel discussions with 4.75 hours AMA PRA Category 1 Credit(s)™ available. Two and a half (2.5) additional credit hours based on review of enduring on-demand material and replays of the Saturday lectures will be available to all registrants for 30 days. For more information please contact fetalechoCME@luriechildrens.org.

Intended audience

This course is designed for obstetric, maternal fetal medicine and cardiac sonographers, fellows in training, obstetricians, maternal fetal medicine specialists, pediatric cardiologists and sonography students embarking on a career in fetal cardiac sonography. Participants should have a basic understanding of fetal imaging.

Course objectives

This course will focus on prenatal detection and fetal echocardiographic evaluation of congenital heart diseases such as cardiac structural abnormalities, cardiac dysfunction and fetal arrhythmia. Upon conclusion of this educational meeting, attendees should have improved their ability to:

- Discuss existing guidelines and indications for fetal echocardiography
- Review normal fetal cardiac physiology and perinatal transition
- Assess normal fetal cardiac anatomy, function and rhythm by echocardiography
- Identify fetal echocardiographic features in congenital heart defects, fetal arrhythmia and cardiac dysfunction
- Apply learned techniques to optimize fetal echocardiographic images to accurately assess cardiac abnormalities
